One Hive Foundation Travel Grants

Last updated 10/20/2026

Who

The One Hive Foundation travel grant aims to support beekeepers and legislative liaisons interested in strengthening their advocacy and policy engagement skills, enabling them to effectively represent the interests of the beekeeping community. Priority will be given to representatives of beekeeping organizations, as the knowledge and experience gained through this opportunity is expected to be shared with and utilized by the broader organizations and communities they represent. Grants are made directly to the individual attending; past travel grant recipients are not eligible to apply again.

What

This grant enables beekeepers to attend the annual workshop, "Bee-Friendly Policy & Advocacy Training," led by Dr. Judy Wu-Smart of the University of Nebraska at the American Beekeeping Federation (ABF) Annual Conference. Eligible uses of grant funds include airfare, hotel, and other travel-related expenses. These grants are subject to a maximum amount, which is indicated on the application form. All recipients will also receive a complimentary registration to the ABF conference. At this time there are no travel grants available for other conferences or workshops.

When

Travel grant applications typically open in the summer, with decisions finalized in the fall for participation in the following January's ABF conference.

Where

Because the American Beekeeping Federation (ABF) conference changes locations annually, the policy and advocacy workshop is hosted in a different city each year. To check the location for this year, please visit abfnet.org.

How

Applications must be submitted through One Hive Foundation's online application portal here.
